I LAUGH TIME

"You're either too early or too late."

The Pastor Speaks

"And Yet We Complain"

A few scrawney sheep, a ragged robe, an acre of rock-covered land, a shabby mud hut for a home -- this was all that many of Jesus' followers had to call their own. Jesus still found it necessary to look them squarely in the eye and say "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matthew 6:33) They too, needed to be warned about the dangers of seeking happiness by accumulating this world's goods. Although they had little that we would want for ourselves, they still needed to be warned of the dangers of seeking materials instead of God.

Two shiny Chevrolets, a closet full of suits, a twenty-acre farm in the country, a forty-thousand dollar home with all season heating and cooling -- many Americans have this much. How much more do we need the reprimand of our Lord that 'a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he posseth."

Let's face it! God has blessed us abundantly with this world's goods, yet we still find room to complain about what we may not have, what we may lack. Let us not make the mistake of thinking that our life will be satisfied if we accumulate all that this world has to offer. Paul says in Hebrews 13:5, "Let your behaviour be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Let us in this life be content not just with having the things of this life, but with having as our precious possession the presence and the power of God himself.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

BEYOND THE LAW

Lesson for January 25, 1970

Background Scripture: Matthew 5 through 7; Deuteronomy 5 21; 6:1-9; Romans 12 through 13.

Devotional Reading: Deuteronomy 6:1-9.

Legalism is always a problem for Christianity. On the one hand, man can hardly live without laws, rules, and regulations. Without these, his life is largely undisciplined and his society breaks down in anarchy. Law brings a certain security and order which man deeply desires and needs.

Yet, legalism leaves perceptive men unsatisfied. Rules tend to become more important than people. People may become more concerned for the letter of the law than for the spirit of purpose behind it. Some feel smug and complacent with its minimum morality. Others find it possible to observe the law and still deal dishonestly.

Jesus And The Law

We find that Jesus was quite well aware of both the strengths and weaknesses of the law. To the Jew there was nothing more important than their religious legalism. The scribes and pharisees cherished the law as their forefathers had once cherished the temple. We can understand then why Jesus' attitude toward the law both puzzled and irritated them. Though at times he seemed to express respect for the law, much of what he said appeared to indicate something quite the opposite.

What was his attitude toward the law? If we turn to his own words in Matthew 5:17, we find: "Think not that I have come to abolish the law and the prophets; I have come not to abolish them but to fulfill them." What does he mean "fulfill"? The J. B. Phillips' translation uses instead the term "complete," and Good News For Modern Man (Today's English Version) renders this as: "I have not come to do away with them, but to give them real meaning." In other words, the purpose behind the law is what Jesus wants to accomplish. The law only partly accomplishes God's purpose.

What Is "Work?"

For example, the sabbath laws were very strict and legalistic. Because God had instructed men not to labor on the sabbath, the leaders had felt it necessary to determine just what is "work?" They decided that walking is "work" when it exceeds a certain distance. Thus, to walk several miles on the sabbath would mean breaking the sabbath laws. The same was true of any labor a man might perform; it was regarded as an infringement of the sabbath.

Jesus indicated that the law had gone beyond what God had intended. God made the sabbath for man's enrichment, not to restrict him. If the sabbath law was used to keep men from performing acts of kindness, mercy, or helpfulness to others (such as healing a man), then the law was not fulfilling God's purpose.

Was Jesus for or against the sabbath laws then? The answer we must be that he was for the purpose behind these laws, but against some of the individual laws that had strayed from God's purpose.

A Higher Morality

Thus, Jesus asked of his disciples, not a morality that was lower than the laws, but a higher one. Though the law was a necessary guide, love was a higher and better motive for a person's behavior. "For I tell you, unless your righteousness exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees, you will never enter the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5:20). They were never to be satisfied with anything except the perfection of God himself. With this as a background, Jesus could well say, "You have heard . . . But I say to you . . ." for his object was to take his followers, not to a lower level of morality, but to one that was even higher.

The law was intended to be a tool for helping men to become more righteous. Sometimes, though, men took the law itself as god. Today, centuries later, we still must be careful that we don't let our faith become the legalism God never intended it to be.

Social Security

Send your questions to: Questions and Answers, Social Security Office, P.O. Box 2496, Lynchburg, Va. 24501.

Q. How can a disabled young man my age (26) collect social security benefits? Don't you need years and years of work covered by social security to get payments?

A. No. A special provision of the social security law applies in the case of a young worker who becomes disabled before he is 31. He needs social security credit for only about half the time between age 21 and his age when he becomes disabled. If a man 26 years old becomes disabled, he would need only about 2 1/2 years of work under social security to be eligible for cash payments.

Q – My mother received social security for me two years after my father died, until I was 18. I have worked two years and saved some money to go to college. Could I get any social security benefits if I started school now?

A – Yes. Social security benefits are payable to the child of a deceased worker if the child is between 18 and 22 years of age, unmarried, and enrolled as a full time student. If you do go back to school, you will need to go to the social security office and make application for payments to begin.

Q – Since I retired and started getting social security, our 40 year old mentally retarded daughter also gets a payment on my account. Will that stop when I am gone?

A – No it will not stop. A disabled adult child's benefit continues as long as the child is disabled and unmarried. If she is unable to handle her own funds when the parents are gone, a guardian or other suitable payee will receive the benefit in her behalf.
